TASH-TASTIC!

Tell your guy, it's time to grow the mo...

November is upon us, so if your fella is growing some facial hair for this good cause, here's how to make sure he does it in style (we're thinking Johnny Depp, not Hulk Hogan)...

the horseshoe

Aka the biker moustache. It looks like an upside-down 'U' or horseshoe, and generally people go for it when they want to make a statement. Think Village People and you've got it.

james franco

the painter's brush

This moustache covers the width of the mouth and is usually worn with slightly rounded corners - stroking it with your thumb and index finger will tame the hair over time and help train it to grow outwards rather than down.

mo's of the mo

The guys from Ted's Grooming Room give us the low-down on which 'taches are trending...

thomas lennon

the anchor

This is probably the most popular style we get asked for. The idea is to keep a thin moustache above the upper lip that reaches to the edge of both sides of the mouth, unattached but complemented by a chin beard that's grown into a point.

zac efron

the lampshade

It actually looks like a lampshade and is quite classic and neat, so perfect for those having their first venture into the world of the mo.

the ducktail

This is a mix of a moustache and a beard, so all of it connects. If you want to make it different, ask for some detail in the beard.
